POETRY.

THE CHANGE.

You ask me for a song, my dear—
I would, but cannot sing;
The songs you once so loved to hear
Have flown with time's swift wing.
Nay, e'en the feelings of my heart
Are changed and altered so,
That what was once of life a part,
Now proves my greatest woe.

Oh, ask me not about my fate,
Its strings are broken long—
Its tones of love for ever mute,
And banished with my song.
The end of love, a love so true,
But living to decay,
Like flowers of earth has lost its hue,
And swiftly pass'd away.

Then wonder not, my lovely fair—
Since time and change are one—
The dearest joys on earth we share
By fate are soon undone.
My voice was cheerful, while its tone
T'ye heart's theme could fill,
But when the dawn grew pale and lone,
My heart and lute were still.

JOSE MARIA, THE CELEBRATED SPANISH BANDIT.

FROM THE DIARY OF A TRAVELLER.

Spain, Italy, and Bohemia, have always been noted for banditti; forests and mountains are alike the homes of the free and the freebooter; all are picturesque enough. Salvator Rosa, Byron, and Mrs Radcliffe, have given all the charm of the arts; the corsair and the bandit appear to our youthful imagination, with a grace that

"Dear and yet dearer for its mystery."

They all, to our mind's eye, wear cloaks which they fold round them, a hat "heavy with sable plumes;" they are pale, and have an air of gentlemanlike melancholy. I cannot state that my only acquaintance in that line had any of these attributes. To be sure he had foreworn the wild wood, and taken service with the king. Jose Maria, the fame of whose exploits will long linger in the ballads of a summer evening, and the stories of the circle gathered round the hearth in the posada, was the guard under whose escort we were travelling. Nearly three hundred miles of country were placed in his charge to keep free from robbers, and such was the terror of his name that the pretty well succeeded in doing it. He was a little man, with small, almost feminine, features; by the by, his hands and feet were singularly small; and unlike the rest of his countrymen, he was silent, and used no gesticulation when talking. His look was generally down-cast, and peculiarly long eye lashes almost hid his eyes; but when he did raise them they were something to see. The boldest might have quailed before the cold, cruel determination of that glance. There was "the power to do, the will to dare." It knew neither pity nor obstacles; nothing came between it and its purpose. Generally speaking, he seemed to observe little of what was going on, but every now and then he sent round a quick cat-like glance, from under his eyelashes, which, as it were, swept round, and discerned everything at a look.

It was curious to note the entire submission of the five or six fellows who formed the remainder of our escort. Bold they were and spirited, but they fairly cowered before him. At night, when the hour was somewhat advanced, they sent in a petition for more wine. We, who were in an adjacent apartment, could hear that they had arrived at that state of noisiness, when the coming events of quarrelling east their shadows before. My companion turned to Jose Maria, and asked him if he did not think that they had already had wine enough. Jose Maria took the cigar from his mouth which he had been silently smoking—"They are to have no more wine, let them go to bed," and beckoning back the messenger, "held him with his glittering eye" while he heeded, in a care less tone, "tell them Jose Maria says so." Talk of the magic of a look! I own that I, myself, fairly started in my saddle, the first time that I met it. The man retreated positively quite pale, and in five minutes every sound was hushed; all obeyed his injunction literally, and went to bed. Generally speaking, through our whole journey, we were with the other travellers in the inn kitchen—and the Spanish inn kitchen is still what it was in Don Quixote's time, the centre of bustle and news. It is usually a large irregular room, the rafters of the unceilinged roof blackened with smoke, as are the walls. A lamp swings in the middle, the clay burners of a very graceful shape, just the old simple Greek. Benches, stools, and one or two old arm chairs are scattered about, but all with an inclination to the huge chimney. On the hearth burns an immense wood fire, over which is hung a vast iron pot, in which is stewing the general supper. It instantly recalls to mind the iron pots from which the cook fished up a pullet wherewith to stay Sancho's appetite, at the breakfast of Camacho the rich. This is emptied smoking hot on a dish, from which every one has his portion. The business of the supper over, the amusements of the evening commence.

Nothing can be more striking than the various groups. There is the cara come to collect his daily pittance of news; old grey peasants, every head a picture; some two or three friars, with the ample folds of monkish garment—the muleteer, even browner than his companions, by constant exposure to the weather—the dashing contrabandist, with his scarlet tags and brown jacket covered with rows of shining buttons—all these form a picturesque whole, equally new and attractive to the English observer. A kind of concert soon begins—some one or the other has a guitar, and this is accompanied by two wooden spoons placed on the knee, and played like castanets, with a wonderfully accurate ear for time. Some sing, almost all join in chorus, and the dancel of the inn, conscious of a tightly-laced jacket, and a neat foot and ankle, gets up and dances a bolero. What a contrast do the indolent, enjoying people of the south, form to our business-seeking and discontented nation! But exertion grows out of want—we need so much more, our wishes lie further off. It is impossible to give a taste for luxury to a nation, whose greatest luxuries are so much within their reach. Give a Spaniard sunshine, sleep and cold water, and life has little left to offer.

Jose Maria had originally been a peasant, and roused him from his indolence. He was taunted and insulted by a huge, tall fellow, double his size. They agreed to meet and fight it out after the fashion peculiar to the lower class of Spaniards. They twist their cloak round the left arm, take the long knife they always wear in the right hand, and cut away at each other. But as they proceeded to the place of action, Jose Maria had time to consider that he stood no chance against his gigantic and practised antagonist. To make things acute, he stabbed him to the heart on the way. This act obtained for him a sobriquet, idiomatic and untranslatable, signifying the ready little fellow, or one who is never taken by surprise. After this he fled from his native village, and took to the campo, a Spanish term for highwayman.

For years his exploits had made him a terror to the country. At length he was pardoned, taken into the service of the government, and, as I have before stated, a great extent of country committed to his charge. In this situation, his daring courage, his presence of mind, and his fertility of resource, were as conspicuous as ever. Indeed, Jose Maria was one of those extraordinary men who require nothing but a sphere for action. Any warlike monarch might have asked,

"What lacks that brave
That a king should have?"

For he had all those qualities that compel success, and ensure command. No man better knew the value of fear. He inspired and trusted to it. At last, after the district had been kept completely free of their kind, four robbers resolved on an attempt. They met one night at a lonely farm house, near a chestnut wood, which they thought would serve as a retreat. While they were deliberating, a scout ran in to say that there was a little down-looking man slowly riding towards the house. "It is Jose Maria," exclaimed the landlord, and flight or submission was the order of the night. But one robber, bolder than the rest, ordered the gates of the courtyard to be closed, and the rest to be left to him. Five minutes had scarcely elapsed before a horseman rode up to the door, and, rapping loudly, demanded admission: "Open," said the well known voice of command, "to Jose Maria." According to his old custom of facing all dangers single-handed, he always rode first, leaving the men under his command just within call. All within fell back at the name, the landlord, pale and trembling, opened the gates, and Jose Maria galloped in. But the robber who had ordered them to be closed, had stationed himself behind them with a loaded carbine. He fired, and lodged the contents in Jose Maria's heart. He made one bound in his saddle, and fell from his horse a corpse. So terminated the career of a man who wanted only a few fortunate incidents to have been considered a hero.

The price of second quality is reduced from the rate of 13 to 12 cents per foot. All those who wish to contract for this Glass are requested to specify NEW ENGLAND CROWN GLASS. WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1835.

REPUBLICAN JUBILEE IN TENNESSEE.

We find in the Nashville Union of the 7th inst., a long and interesting account of a Republican Jubilee, given at Nashville on the 31st Oct. last, by the friends of Gen. JACKSON, Mr VAN BUREN, and Col. R. M. JOHNSON, in honor of Gov. CARROLL, the Hon. FELIX GRUNDY, the Hon. J. K. POLK, and the Hon. CAVE JOHNSON.

At twelve o'clock, the procession was formed, and proceeded under a military escort to Vauxhall Garden, where about 1000 persons sat down to a sumptuous entertainment, Dr Felix Robinson officiating as President of the Day.

"Never was any similar celebration in this city," says the Union, "conducted with greater order and decorum; and never was more zeal, harmony, good feeling, and unanimity of purpose, manifested by so large an assemblage of citizens. At least five hundred attended who did not partake of the dinner, so great was the crowd. So great was the number of the company, that it was found impossible for the speakers to be heard in the Vauxhall buildings. On this account, after the cloth was removed, and the regular toasts gone through, the company adjourned, by unanimous consent, to the beautiful yard attached to the establishment, where the toasts, complimentary to the guests, were repeated, and where their speeches were delivered to a truly large and attentive audience."

The fourth regular toast—
William Carroll—Following the lead of a veteran, the youthful general unheeded his sword, and bared his bosom to the bullets of the enemy in our defence. Reposing now in retirement, he raises his voice in the cause of democracy, and speaks to the old companions of his glory, as becomes an unfettered freeman.

In reply, Gov. Carroll addressed the company in a short and appropriate speech. He said in substance, among other things, that he felt more honored, more peace of mind, and more laudable pride in his present private station, than he could have felt in being elevated to the highest political station at the expense of principle. He said that his principles and adherence to the Republican party, and of course his preference of Mr Van Buren for the Presidency, had been openly avowed during the late gubernatorial canvass. The consequence was, that his opponents had for a time triumphed—that he had been beaten; but he felt a conscious pride in having fallen, as a soldier should fall, sword in hand, with his face to the enemy. He concluded his speech amidst a burst of cheering and huzzas of approbation, by offering the following sentiment:—

The Memory of Thomas Jefferson.—He thought there was something of value in the preservation of the Republican party.

The sixth regular toast—
Hon. Felix Grundy.—Honored in early manhood by his native and by his adopted State, with the public confidence—a zealous and uncompromising Republican in the civil revolution of 1800. The principles of his youth have only been confirmed by increase of years.

When this toast was given, and the loud cheering had ceased, Mr Grundy rose and thanked the company for their approbation of his public course. He then proceeded to address the company, for an hour and a half. He showed the impolicy and imprudence of running Judge White for the Presidency, and demonstrated the utter hopelessness of that gentleman's prospects.—He then gave a sketch of the prominent features and incidents in Mr Van Buren's character and life—and a history of his political conduct and opinions from the commencement of the last war, down to the present time. In conclusion, he referred to, and upheld the right of instruction—and addressing himself to the members of the Legislature present, declared that, unless otherwise instructed, he should vote for Mr Benton's expunging resolution. Mr Grundy concluded by giving the following toast, which was received with thunders of applause and marks of approbation:—

Martin Van Buren.—A fit successor to carry out the principles and measures of Andrew Jackson.

The eighth regular toast—

Hon. James K. Polk.—Devoted to the rights and interests of the people—to his public duties—to the great principles of the present administration, and to the unity of the republican party. The admiration of his countrymen shall be the reward of his patriotic services.

Brought Mr Polk upon his feet, when he delivered, says the Union, one of the "most masterly, and eloquent political speeches ever delivered in this city."

Upon the announcement of the eleventh regular toast—

Hon. Cave Johnson—Candid in his judgments—firm in his principles—dependent in his enlightened constitution—he has again bared his bosom to the bullets of the enemy, and given him still another triumphant victory.

Mr Johnson arose, and as soon as the loud cheering by which his rising was welcomed, had abated, delivered a most manly, clear, and statesmanlike speech, upon the present state of public affairs, in regard to the Presidency, and the causes which have led to the present excitement in Tennessee. He laid bare to public examination the movements of the Washington Caucus of last winter, and exposed the influence which the Whig opposition, Bank-men, and Nullifiers, had exerted in producing those movements, and in bringing the presidential question to its present crisis in that State.—He said he had submitted his course to his constituents, and had been sustained in the position which he had found it his duty to assume, and concluded by offering the following sentiment, which met with a most hearty and loud response from the company:—

Union, harmony, self-denial, concession; every thing for the cause, nothing for men; should be the watchword and motto of the democratic party.

From among the remaining regular toasts, we select the following:—

Andrew Jackson.—The evening of his life may be clouded by the malice of his pretended friends and open enemies; but the sun of his glory will shine upon posterity with unobscured and immortal splendor.

Martin Van Buren.—The "Magician"—devoted from his youth to the cause of civil liberty—circumspect and collected in the midst of difficulties—sagacious and practical in his views—equal to every emergency requiring genius and attainment. These are the words which he lays the turbulent spirits of his enemies and dissolves all their machinations to destroy him.

Richard M. Johnson.—The veteran legislator—the gallant soldier who poured out his blood like water in defence of his country's rights. That country will soon reward him with another pledge of its gratitude and confidence.

Several other speeches were made, and many patriotic toasts drunk, which we have no room to publish. In commenting upon the celebration, the large number, present, and the great unanimity which prevailed, the Union says—"However much cause some of our friends in this State may have formerly seen for despondency, and their fears for the ultimate triumph of their own republican principles, in the pending contest for the Presidency, have now fled. In the other States, where the republicans have been united, no similar fears have been felt. The knell of the No-party Party cause has now tolled in Tennessee; and from this day forth, she will stand regenerated, redeemed, and disenthralled, from the gross delusions by which a few partisans and political apostates have attempted to surround her."

The New York evening papers of Monday, brought on by passengers in the cars, were on file at City Hall, at 6 o'clock last evening, at which time neither the Land or Steamboat Mail had arrived—the former having been detained, probably, by the inability of the New Haven boat to make her passage in the usual time, in consequence of the storm. We have copied the only items of news which we could find in the evening papers.

Vera Cruz papers to the 8th inst. have been received at New York. The capture of the El Correo cutter had produced much excitement, and the safety of American citizens and property in Mexico was much endangered. A large number of commissions for privateers had, it is said, been sent to Vera Cruz. Great efforts were making to carry on the Texian war with vigor. The Archbishop of Mexico and Bishop of Puebla had promised a million of dollars. 2000 troops were to be assembled at Matamoros, and 300 cavalry under Gen. Motezuma. Santa Anna was to take the field in person—he was to leave his seat for Mexico, 7th inst. Tranquility prevails throughout Mexico.

Canton dates to June 2d have also been received at New York. Howqua, the Hong merchant, died in May. It was very sickly at Canton. The Gov Findlay, from the East Coast, had brought back the party who, in April last, attempted to penetrate to the Bohea hills of Fuhkeen. The expedition was a failure.

The Proprietors of the Zoological Exhibition in Union street, are ready to receive visitors, and have fitted up the building in very fine style for their accommodation. The collection of animals is much larger than that which was on exhibition at the same place the last season, and contains a very large number of rare and beautiful specimens. The whole establishment is in perfect order, and the visitor will be sure to meet with the same polite and gentlemanly treatment which gained so much popularity for the exhibition last year. We intend a long visit to the collection in a few days, when we shall be enabled to speak more fully of its merits.

Accident.—The body of a man respectfully dressed, was picked up at the head of Long Wharf, yesterday afternoon about 6 o'clock. It appeared from the mark upon his shirt that his name was "J. Andra Whitcomb, of Bolton, Mass." He was heard to fall into the water but a few minutes before. No jury was summoned by the Coroner.

We heard it stated yesterday, that Mr KENDALL, the Post Master General, had paid the sum of fifty thousand dollars, which his predecessor in office borrowed of the Commonwealth Bank in this city.

The Battle Fields of our Revolutionary Fathers.—The county which embraces the proud heights of Bunker Hill, the plains of Lexington, and the battle grounds of Concord, have returned Democratic Senators to our State Legislature, by a majority of nine hundred.

The Liberator states that Miss Harriet Martineau, her travelling companion, Miss Jeffrey, and Mrs Thompson—all from England—were present at the late meeting of the Female Anti Slavery Society, and that Miss Martineau made a short speech and declared her agreement with the principles of the abolitionists.

If our neighbor, who has been for a day or two trying to "correct our arithmetic," will look at his own paper of Friday, from which we copied, he will be convinced that our greatest error was in taking it for granted that he could add up a column of figures correctly.

The schr Cash, when off Cape Ann, on Monday morning, on her passage from Bath to this city, lost overboard Mr Benj. Potter, Seaman, belonging to Bowdoin, Me. He has left a wife and family at that place.—Briggs.

Accident.—A child of Frederick Howes, Esq. was knocked down in Federal street, Salem, on Saturday last, by a loose horse, and considerably though not dangerously injured.

On Friday last, as the mail stage for Salem was descending a hill near "Tucker's Farm," one of the horses stumbled and fell, and instantly broke his neck.

The editor of the Springfield Republican, if we may judge from his usually milk-and-water paper, is in a rabid state at the present time. We hope he won't bite any body.

A work, compiled from the private papers of Aaron Burr, by Matthew L. Davis, of N. York, is nearly ready for the press.

Municipal.—At a meeting of the Mayor and Aldermen, on Monday:—The Mayor being absent by reason of indisposition, Alderman Samuel A. Elliot was chosen chairman, pro tempore. The proceedings of the inhabitants of Charlestown respecting Warren Bridge, were read, and referred to Aldermen Lewis, Greele, and Hayward, with such as the Common Council may join, to consider and report. Petition of John Sanery and others, for leave to establish a wholesale Fish Market near Faneuil Hall Market—referred. The order of the Common Council, appointing a committee to report the expediency of using blocks of wood as substitutes for stone in paving the streets of the city—read and laid upon the table. Aldermen Leighton and Gurney were added to the committee of the Common Council, consisting of Messrs Josselyn, Craft, and Hunting, to examine and report what unfinished business requires the attention of the present City Council.

Foreign Miscellany.

Coolness in Action.—The coolness of an officer in action, if not even shown in trifles, goes a great way towards maintaining the steadiness of the men. At the battle of Waterloo, I heard Sir John Lambert call one of his commanding officers to order for repeating his (the general's) word of command, reminding him that, when the regiments were in contiguous close columns, they ought to take it from himself! As the brigade was under a terrific fire at the time, the notice of such a trifling breach of rule showed, at all events, that the gallant general was at home! In the course of the five days' fighting which took place near Bayonne, in December, 1813, a single change of fate, with its consequent interchange of civilities, took place between the commanding officer of a French regiment and one of ours; I forget whether it was the 4th or the 9th, but I think it was one of the regiments of that brigade—it had been posted amongst some enclosures which left both its flanks at the mercy of others. The fighting at that place had been very severe, with various success, and while the regiment alluded to was hotly engaged in front, a French corps succeeded in getting in the rear; when the enemy's commandant, advancing to the English one, apologized for troubling him, but begged to point out that he was surrounded, and must consider himself his prisoner! While the British colonel was listening to the mortifying intelligence, and glanced round to see if no hope of escape was left, he observed another body of English in the act of compassing the very corps by which he had been caught; and, returning the Frenchman's salute, begged his pardon for presuming to differ with him in opinion, but that he was labouring under a mistake, for he (the Frenchman) was, on the contrary, his prisoner, pointing in his turn to the movement that had taken place while they had been disputing the point. As the fact did not admit of a doubt, the Frenchman, giving a shrug of the shoulders, and uttering a lament over the fickleness of the war goddess, quietly surrendered.—Random Shots.

Suett's Landlady.—Suett had at one time a landlady who exhibited an inordinate love for the vulgar fluid yelet gin, a beverage which Suett himself by no means held in abhorrence. She would order her servant to get the supplies after the following fashion:—"Betty, go and get a quarter loaf and half a quarter of gin." Off started Betty: she was speedily recalled. "Betty, make it half a quarter loaf and a quarter of gin;" but Betty had never got fairly across the threshold on the mission, ere the voice was again heard—"Betty, on second thoughts, you may as well make it all gin."

Politeness.—No station, rank, or talents can ever excuse a man for neglecting the civilities due from man to man. When Clement XIV. ascended the Papal Chair, the ambassadors of the several states represented at his court waited on his holiness with their congratulations. As they were introduced, and severally bowed, he also bowed, to return the compliment. On this, the master of the ceremonies told his holiness, that he should not have returned the salute. "Oh, I beg your pardon," said he, "I have not been Pope long enough to forget good manners."

An Economical Curate.—In 1795 died the Rev Mr Mattison, for 60 years curate of Pattendale, in Westmoreland. The first infant he christened was afterwards his wife, by whom he had one son and three daughters, all of whom he married in his own church.—His stipend for the first 40 years of his curacy was £12 a year, and for the last 20 not quite £20. Yet he died, at the age of 83, worth £1,000, of which he had saved four-fifths out of the stipend.

A Courtier.—Bonaparte happening one day to ask a person whether it was true that Talleyrand had ever been a bishop. The person questioned, afraid of being discovered by his master in a falsehood, yet conscious of the offence which he might give to so powerful a minister as Talleyrand, formed his answer with ridiculous circumspection.—Tout le monde le dit, et moi, je le crois.—Mackintosh's Diary.

St Josephs, Florida.—This new town has been laid out on convenient lots, which will be offered for sale at public auction on the 14th of December next. The local advantages of this place are of a superior description. It has the best harbor in the Gulf of Mexico, sufficiently deep and capacious to admit ships of war, and likely to become of immense importance as a naval rendezvous in the event of war. The bar has 29 feet of water, while that of Pensacola contains but 22, in consequence of which ships of war are excluded from that port. The site of St Joseph is elevated and healthy; and the new railroad in progress to connect the bay with the river Apalachicola, must give an extraordinary impetus to the business and prosperity of the place.—Prov. Pat.

Portland Alms House.—From the report of the visitors of the Portland Alms House, we collect the following particulars. There are now in the house about 80 inmates. The males are employed on the farm and in the brick yard. The products of the farm are about 40 tons of hay, 150 bushels of barley, 2000 bushels of potatoes, and a large quantity of vegetables, all of which are used by the inmates, except about 500 bushels of potatoes, which are sold. They will make this season about 200,000 bricks. The females are employed in the domestic duties of the house, some in sewing, knitting, spinning, weaving, and making palm leaf hats. The inmates rise in the summer at half past 4 o'clock, and in winter from 5 to 6, and retire in summer at 9, and in winter at 8 o'clock.—Prov. Pat.

Jenks, of the Nantucket Enquirer, has been presented with a string of Onions so large that it made his eyes smart to look at them. If this is not an "odorous comparison," vide Dogberry, we are beat! The reader may turn up his nose and say our puns have been stolen from a leaf of Joe Miller, but our conscience is appeased by the reflection that they are just regaled, and he is either "a punkin-head" or corned, who thinks we have cabbage-d from that rhyter!—V. Y. Spirit of the Times.

The Ruins.—The County Commissioners have been over the ground rendered vacant by the late fire, (in Charlestown) with a view to lay out some new streets and straighten some old ones, and we learn will have another session here on the 25th. One of the principal improvements is to continue the Salem Turnpike in nearly a straight line from Chelsea Bridge to the Square, across the Town Dock and partly on what was formerly Gill street. To this improvement, we understand the Commissioners express themselves favorably disposed.—Bunker Hill Aurora.

Sea Serpent.—The Sea Serpent was seen last week near Half Way Rock, by the crew of the fishing schooner Dove, Capt. Peabody, bound from this port, to Kennelunk. He appeared to be about 60 or 70 feet long. This is rather late in the season for his snake ship; the late mild weather, however, may have induced him to tarry longer in these regions than usual, or he may have become acclimated.

A Point of Order.—A debating society in a town "down east," one evening undertook to discuss the question, "whether intemperance or slavery is productive of the most evil in the United States?" A worthy deacon, contending against the former, proposed to show its effects on its victims, "in eternity." "Stop, stop," cried the chairman, "that's out of the United States."—Nantucket Enquirer.

Providence.—The Providence Journal of Monday has the returns of a census just taken in that city, by which it appears, that the whole number of inhabitants is 19,277; of which 1,223 are blacks. In 1830, the whole number was 16,832, of which 1,213 were blacks. The increase has been between 14 and 15 per cent.—Only 40 white males over 75 years of age—107 females.

In this city, on Sunday evening, by the Rev Mr Gray, Mr J. Chandler to Mrs Sophia Jackson. Nov 16th, by Rev President Lansley, John D. Freeman to Miss Elizabeth Brown, all of Boston. In Newton, Nathan Avery Esq. of East Cambridge, to Harriet Bellows, of N. In North Providence, R. I. by Rev Mr Hall, Mr M. S. Lincoln, of this city, to Mrs Mary Ann Borden, of N. P.

DIED. In this city, Mary Ann, eldest daughter of the late William Austin, of Salem, 28. Nov 23d, Lavina S. Hatchinson, daughter of Henry Hutchinson. On Tuesday, Mrs Keziah E. Ware, wife of Mr Horatio G. Ware. In Chelsea, widow Sarah Fl yd, 42.

Ship from Laguna.—By a ship from the Philadelphia Commercial Herald, dated at 4 P. M. Saturday evening, we learn that the brig Emily arrived that day from Laguna, having sailed on the 31st of October. Letters received by Mr House state that on the 19th the whole rebel force embarked at Cumana, and landed at Puerto Cabello 720 men, and marched immediately for Valencia. They had, according to report, 21 sail of vessels, mostly small craft. Before their arrival at Valencia they were met by the government troops, by whom they were completely defeated. Postscripts to the letters give the following particulars:—
Laguna, 31st Oct, 4 o'clock.—Official news has just arrived from Valencia that the Reformist troops have been completely defeated, 4 to 600 men killed, and Carigo wounded and prisoner.—300 men have escaped to Puerto Cabello.

31st Oct, half-past 5.—This moment the post is in, and as Captain Douglas is just going on board, I have only time to say Carigo is a prisoner in Valencia. Some 60 to 100 men killed of the Rebels, as many wounded and prisoners, and about 400 made their escape to Puerto Cabello. This is glorious, and I hope Cozani and Montilla will follow them up and make an end of them.
